

Academic discipline:
"General psychology"

Code and name of specialty	6-05-0313-01 Psychology
Training course	1
Semester of training	1, 2
Number of class hours	202
Lectures	118
Seminar classes	92
Practical classes	-
Laboratory classes	-
Form of current assessment (credit/differential credit/exam)	exam
Number of credits	2
Competencies to be formed	To know the methodological and theoretical foundations of psychology; main categories of scientific psychology. To know the features and patterns of mental processes. To be able to determine the object, subject, goals and objectives of psychological research; plan and conduct experimental research; give a psychological interpretation of the results of the research within the framework of a particular psychological theory. To possess the skills of interpreting the results of the research of mental processes within the framework of a particular psychological theory. To master the methods of studying mental phenomena.
Brief content of the academic discipline:
The structure of the discipline "General psychology" is represented by 2 sections: "Introduction to the subject of psychology", "Mental cognitive processes". The first section - theoretical and methodological – considers the subject and objectives of psychology as a science, the specifics of the subject of psychology; the formation of psychology as an independent science, the structure of psychology, the basic categories of scientific psychology; the concept of the psyche and consciousness, phylogenesis and ontogenesis of the psyche and consciousness, mental phenomena, the brain and mental phenomena; methodology of the psychological concept. The second section is the concept, structure, specificity, functionality, mechanisms and patterns of mental cognitive processes: sensations, perception, attention, ideas, memory, imagination, thinking, speech, will.	